Operation Sea Jump

BY MAJ. GEN. ROBERT H. PEPPER, USMC
Commanding, 3d Marine Division, FMF

UNDER authority of the Commander U. S. Pacific Fleet and the amplifying directives from the Commanding General, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, and Commander First Fleet, Pacific, the combined strength of the Naval and Marine Amphibious Forces in the Southern California area, supported by corresponding air elements, conducted an amphibious operation at Camp Pendleton, Calif., during the period 20 April to 10 May, 1953. This amphibious force was composed of the Attack Force, Amphibious Group Three, commanded by Rear Adm. Frederick S. Withington, USN, and the Landing Force, Third Marine Division, Reinforced, commanded by Maj. Gen. Robert H. Pepper, USMC. An Aggressor Force composed of commensurate air, surface and ground strength lent realistic and determined opposition to the conduct of the operation.

This could be a brief summation of the graduation exercise in which the Third Marine Division, Reinforced, became eligible to be classed as an existent vital part of the Marine Corps' "Force in Readiness."

This amphibious exercise, as all previous such exercises, was conducted for the primary purpose of completing the final training phase of a Marine Division, in which land, sea, air, and sub-surface activities took place. A secondary purpose was to maintain that close and coordinated relationship with our sister service, the U. S. Navy, without whom the Marine Corps could not accomplish its mission.

A further and determining factor in the conduct of amphibious operations is the need for constant review and improvement of technique, equipment and training. As new weapons of warfare, both defensive and offensive, are developed, techniques and procedures for the conduct of these operations sometimes undergoes drastic change. Training requirements likewise are altered to accommodate these effects and give each individual Marine the necessary instruction to serve as an effective member of a fighting team.

In magnitude, Operation Sea Jump was the largest peacetime amphibious operation since World War II on the West Coast of the U. S. A. with over 20,000 Ma-

Armed Services Set Forced Attrition Plans, Promotion Problem Eased, But Dropoff Due

Pentagon personnel experts this week were busy with planning and implementing policies for the forced attrition of thousands of Reserve officers as a result of cuts in manpower.

At the same time, officials expressed relief over House action easing harsh restrictions on temporary officer promotions, but nonetheless could only foresee considerably reduced promotion prospects for the current fiscal year.

Here is the attrition and promotion picture as it was being drawn late this week at the Pentagon:

ATTRITION

The total number of Reserve officers to be forced off active duty is not yet available, but there's no doubt that it will be in the thousands.

And there is no question but what the Services will accomplish this forced attrition as early as possible in the current fiscal year.

There's a good chance the Reserve Officers Association and other civilian component groups will set up a protest when forced attrition gets under way in earnest, for despite Congressional endorsement of such a plan there will be no severance pay for Reservists who go off active duty involuntarily.

The Services and Reserve leaders had thought this problem was licked when Congress, in passing the Armed Forces Reserve Act last year, provided for contract tours for Reservists. If these tours were ended prematurely, severance pay benefits were provided.

But the Bureau of the Budget and the Defense Department have not been able to get together on the implementation. Spokesmen for Reserve groups have charged in the past that the will of Congress is not being followed. The protests will grow as forced attrition increases.

By Services, here is the present status of forced attrition plans:

ARMY—The Army had feared early last week that as many as 10,000 officers might have to be forced out as a result of a

PROMOTIONS

A serious peril to officer promotions (actually some demotions were threatened) was removed during floor debate in the House on the 1954 Defense Appropriations Bill.

As a result of the action taken by the House, the Services will be able to make many more promotions during fiscal '54 than would have been possible under provisions of the bill as reported originally by the House Appropriations Committee.

But whatever the favorable effects of the House modification, the plain fact is that officer promotions during the current fiscal year will be many thousands less than in fiscal '53 or '52. Cuts in manpower and money will spell fewer advancements.

None of the Services will be able to formulate definite promotion plans until the Senate completes action on the budget and agreement on points of dispute is reached between the Senate and the House. This will probably take until the end of July.

The House Appropriations Committee, in drafting an extension of the Davis Amendment in the '53 funds bill, recommended originally that numerical ceilings on each officer rank go into effect on 1 July and be in effect throughout the fiscal year.

This would have required a day-to-day auditing of officer strengths by the Serv-

Reclamas In Senate Hold Service Hopes

Armed Forces leaders are in the midst of their last fiscal '54 reclamas. The first reclamas on this budget were heard at the Pentagon just about a year ago.

Defense officials went before the Senate Appropriations Committee this week for two reasons: first, to get some of the money knocked out by the House put back, and second to get some of the restrictive riders put in by the House knocked out.

Requests are being made in closed-door hearings for restoration of about $500,000,000 of the $1.3 billion cut from President Eisenhower's estimates of defense needs for the current fiscal year.

The House last week voted $34.4 billion for the Services for fiscal '54, including $12.9 Army, $9.3 Navy and $11. billion for the Air Force.

When it is realized that roughly $2 billion of the Army sum covers expenditures in Korea, it is seen that the budget as voted by the House seems to represent a return to a "balanced funds" concept for the Services. During fiscal '53, by comparison, the Army was given $12.8 billion, and the Navy, $12.8, but the Air Force figure was $21 billion.

The Truman Administration asked for fiscal '54 a total of $40.7 billion, of which $12 was for the Army, $11 for the Navy and $16 for the Air Force.

In addition to asking the Senate to restore about $500 million, Defense leaders are requesting also that some of the restrictive riders voted by the House be amended or eliminated.

It is not yet clear—and probably won't be until the hearings are released—how much of a fight the Defense Department will make in behalf of proficiency flying, cut so drastically by the House. This problem is analyzed in an editorial on Page 1378 of this issue.

A reclama also will be made against the rider forbidding use of funds to aid in off-duty education, discussed on the back page.

Chances are that the rider on retirement of career officers, which now permits voluntary retirements under conditions more liberal than those in the Van Zandt Amendment of previous years, will not be strongly opposed.

Also the new version of the Davis Amendment is not apt to have energetic Defense Department protest.

The Senate Appropriations Committee probably will report the money bill next week. After debate and vote in the Senate, the measure will go to a Conference Committee for resolution differences between the two legislative bodies.

The War In Korea

It was a dreary, rain-drenched week in Korea. A torrential downpour soaked the entire front and slowed down ground action to a sluggish pace. A heavy overcast also kept Allied planes on the ground for the most part, and not a single MiG was encountered by Sabre jet pilots during the entire week. The week ended with clearing weather and renewed fighting. A day-by-day account of the action follows:

Thursday—Ground action along the 155-mile front decreased sharply. A group of Sabres caught a Communist armored regiment massed in a valley on the western front and plastered it with missiles. The smoke and dust that rose from the valley made it impossible to assess the damage wrought by the Allied planes.

Friday—Under a devastating Red Artillery barrage, enemy troops once again seized key heights on the eastern front. South Korean infantrymen stormed and captured Lookout Mountain which dominates the valleys to the south where supplies are fed to Allied lines. But as night came, the enemy counterattacked and succeeded in driving the ROK forces from the summit.

Saturday—It was an uneventful 24 hours except for a day-long shelling of Communist positions by United States planes, tanks and artillery. The Fifth Air Force dumped bombs along every section of the front except at the eastern end where bad weather barred them. The Eighth Army sent shells ripping into enemy lines.

Sunday—The heaviest fighting in a day of relatively light action was around Virginia Hill where ROK forces, warned of an enemy sneak attack, repulsed a 400-man attack. Some 100 Communists were killed or wounded. On the central front, the enemy lost 97 men in a savage attack against an outpost of Sniper Ridge. Warships, celebrating Independence Day, fired 21-gun salvos against enemy shore positions.

Monday—Poor weather continued and from four to six inches of rain fell all across the peninsula. All action save a few patrol skirmishes was washed out.

Tuesday—The last remaining Red on Porkchop Hill was driven off by U. S. infantrymen after a bayonet-rifle butt encounter. A few miles to the east, ROK Second Division forces, fighting on Arrowhead Ridge, smashed back a reinforced enemy attack. Some 700 to 1000 Chinese Communists had surrounded two outposts controlling Arrowhead.

Wednesday—With clearing weather and bright skies, fighting perked up considerably. The Communists, defeated yesterday around Arrowhead Ridge, renewed the fighting with a savage attack. As the day ended, the fighting raged with the outcome still in the balance. Other heavy fighting broke out near Panmunjom on the western front where Reds hit outposts Berlin and East Berlin. The Communists forced a brief Allied withdrawal but were driven back before the fighting ceased. Once again Allied planes took to the air, and fighter-bombers dropped the bulk of their bomb loads on the Old Baldy area of the western front, the Punchbowl on the eastern front and positions on the central front east of Pyongyang. Navy planes from the U. S. carriers Princeton and Boxer hit enemy positions on the east-central front farther north, and carrier jets scored three direct hits on a hydro-electric plant near Hamhung.

United States casualties rose to 136,388 for the period through midnight 3 July, the Department of Defense announced this week.

The overall figure includes 24,685 killed, 100,328 wounded and 11,375 missing in action. Broken down into the various services, the figures are:

Army—20,204 killed, 75,984 wounded and 9,827 missing; Navy—384 killed, 1,526 wounded and 94 missing in action; Marine Corps—3,580 killed, 22,771 wounded and 571 missing in action; Air Force—517 killed, 47 wounded and 883 missing in action.

Army Ends Fiscal '53 Promotions, 694 To Capt.

The Army closed out fiscal '53 with the promotion to captain of 694 first lieutenants—the largest single list of advancements during the past six months.

The promotions, reported in Special Orders No. 126 on 30 June, the last day of the fiscal year, included 630 on the Army Promotion List, 2 Chaplains, 40 Medical Service Corps and 22 Women's Medical Specialist Corps officers.

The cut-off date of rank was 30 June 1950, the end of the basic zone of consideration which was extended by six six months during the course of the selections.

Still to be promoted to captain are the "5 per centers" and also some officers within the basic zone for whom complete records were lacking and whose promotions consequently had to be delayed.

200 Graduate At Armed Forces Staff College

Admiral Lynde D. McCormick, Supreme Allied Commander, Atlantic, last week told the graduating class of the Armed Forces Staff College that the North Atlantic Treaty Organization will be the prime mover if war should come "and if we want to win, that organization should have the best the nations can supply."

He noted, too, that the agreement "is far more than a defense military alliance. The signatories, now fourteen in number, are also seeking to eliminate conflict in their international economic policies and to encourage mutual economic and cultural cooperation."

Among those attending were Lt. Gen. A. D. Bruce, USA, Commandant of the College; Lt. Gen. J. E. Dahlquist, USA, Chief of the Army Field Forces; Vice Adm. J. J. Ballentine, USN, Commander, Air Force Atlantic Fleet; Maj. Gen. E. W. Barnes, USAF, Deputy Commander, Tactical Air Command, and Rear Adm. E. R. McLean, jr., USN, Deputy Commandant of the College.

Also Brig. Gen. J. H. Wallace, USAF, Deputy Commandant of the College; Rear Adm. W. A. Bowers, USN-Ret., former CO of the Naval Administrative Command of the College until his retirement on 30 June; Col. W. H. Harris, USA, Executive and Deputy Commandant; and Chaplain F. F. Smart, jr., USN.

Two hundred senior officers were in the graduating class. They included 63 Army officers, 51 Navy, 64 Air Force, nine Marine Corps, and one each from the Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey and Central Intelligence Agency, and 10 Allied Observers.

Gen. Bradley's Statement Tells Of Gratitude As He Prepares To Take Industry R&D Post

"The Army and the country have been very good to me," said General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as he announced this week he will join the Bulova Research and Development Laboratories, Inc., as Chairman of the Board, when he goes on the inactive list on 16 August. Here is the text of General Bradley's statement:

"The Army and the country have been very good to me, and have given me many varied opportunities to serve. I have been entrusted with great responsibilities in combat, and with the veterans, and with the peacetime services. For these assignments, and these opportunities, I am truly grateful.

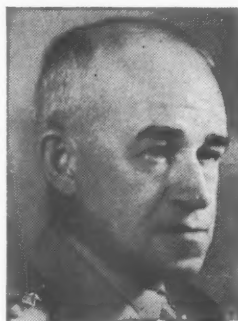

"From this experience, it seems to me that two fields offer the greatest opportunity to continue to contribute to the defense of my country: one is education, and the other is in the field of scientific research and development. The field of education—serving with a military school or with a university—was particularly attractive to me because of my interest in young people, because I served eight years at West Point as an instructor, and because of my firm belief that America can only be as strong as the spirit and the intelligence of its youth.

"Industry—especially the research and development side of it—is also very appealing. No one appreciates more than a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff the vital contribution that our American industry makes to the security of the nation. In recent years—with the rapid developments and changes in electronics, guided missiles, and atomic energy—it has become increasingly evident that America's defense is largely dependent on the inventive genius of our scientists and engineers, and the best application of their genius to our military problems.

More and Better Defense

"It is obvious from the present situation in the world, that America and her Allies must have more and better defense; and that is must be maintained. Our chance to accomplish this within our means is entirely dependent on the improvements in weapons and techniques, which result from the steady, thoughtful application of our best research and development skills—combined with our best engineering and industrial skills.

"For many years, I have been aware of the continuing need for close coordination and cooperation between our laboratories and the Armed Forces. Prior to World War II, I was in charge of the weapons section of the Infantry School where I developed a keen appreciation of the importance of linking research with practical military needs. Subsequently, in North Africa, Sicily, France, and Germany—and lately in Korea—I have seen dramatic results from this teamwork—advanced weapons which provide maximum effectiveness and vital protection for our American men in action.

"Therefore, my decision went to research and industry. I have chosen to work with a precision industry, the Bulova Research and Development Laboratories, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Bulova Watch Company. It has already contributed significantly to the development of new weapons, and is capable, in my opinion, of playing an important role in the future.

Labs Founded After Korea

"The research laboratories were founded after the outbreak of the Korean War, and under the guidance of Mr. Arde Bulova have drawn together some outstanding scientists and engineers in the precision field. I first became acquainted with and interested in the Bulova approach to our national problems when they founded the Joseph Bulova School of Watchmaking for handicapped veterans. In one of the most difficult trades, they gave a lot of our wounded men the opportunity to establish themselves again as fully self-supporting citizens, and it was with great pride that I participated five years later in a reunion of their first graduates—still going strong.

"As Chairman of the Board of the Laboratories company, I shall be responsible only for over-all policy guidance and shall be free from day-to-day operations. Because of my familiarity with many of our defense requirements, it is my hope and belief that I can aid in establishing programs at Bulova which will make a major contribution to National Defense."

Service Promotions

ices to make certain the law was not being broken, and as was pointed out in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL would have required the Services to establish safety margins in order to keep within the statute.

The Services had believed when suggested ceilings were reported to the House Committee that these would constitute year-end strengths. The Committee's original proposal, however, was on a full-year basis.

The Air Force was most alarmed. Its officials said that about 150 majors would have to be demoted in order for the Air Force to get within the ceilings specified in the Committee's original action.

However, when floor debate on the money bill began, Appropriations Committee members agreed to an amendment which would place the ceilings in effect for the last quarters of the fiscal year.

Thus, the Services must meet by next 1 April the specified limitations. Until then, the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 and the usual budget restrictions in terms of dollar limitations will control temporary promotions.

It is to be noted that by next April the Armed Services Committees undoubtedly will recommend a long-range program for controlling temporary promotions.

The Arends Subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee held hearings on this problem earlier this year, but will wait until next year to complete action and make recommendations.

The Arends Subcommittee study was initiated as a result of the Davis Amendment controversy last year, which at one time found the Navy facing the possibility of demoting some 5,000 junior officers.

The Appropriations Committee said it would not employ a promotion rider if the Armed Services Committee suggested another way to control temporary promotions. Since the Armed Services group offered no plan, the Appropriations Committee again employed the rider technique.

It now remains to be seen what the Senate will decide to do on this issue. Likelihood is that eventually the Senate will decide to go along with the House action.

Marine Corps

The Marine Corps said its current plans call for a reduction of approximately 1,000 active duty Reserve officers over the number maintained during fiscal 1953.

Of this total, Headquarters said, about 500 will be Reservists who have completed their two years of obligated service and who request release to inactive duty. The remaining number will be absorbed by decreasing new Reserve officer procurement.

Kuter, USAF, Commander, Air University. ## Operation Sea-Jump

rines and approximately an equal number of naval personnel participating, together with thousands of tons of equipment, ammunition and rations to sustain this fighting force. Its execution approached the normal conditions of actual combat except for the free use of live ammunition. With accent on speed, mobility and sustained fighting ability, the amphibious force effected the actual landing on 5 May (D-Day) by surface craft and helicopter transported assault troops supported by naval gunfire and atomic weapons against the vigorous opposition of Aggressor ground and air forces in which they also utilized atomic weapons. This was the background of a nip-and-tuck battle that continued for five days until the amphibious forces achieved victory.

Six Months Preparation

The operation was preceded by six months of intensive day and night training involving the most modern weapons of warfare, including the atomic weapon, artillery, aircraft, helicopters, naval gunfire, tanks, amphibian tractors and trucks, antiaircraft guns, and full utilization of the latest items of communication equipment.

On the premise that our country has an urgent need for a force in readiness in view of the present world situation, the Third Marine Division, as an essential part of the Marine Corps Force, is now capable of movement on sudden notice to any threatened area, fully combat equipped and loaded aboard ships of the Navy, and ready for immediate combat action on arrival. This, then, is the principal result of Operation Sea Jump, and constitutes a return to the taxpayer for his investment in the Marine Corps.

Many lessons were learned as a result of this operation and further study and evaluation of complete and detailed reports, covering all phases of the operation, will reveal a great many more, all to be applied in the conduct of future amphibious operations; whether under peaceful conditions or otherwise in the service of our country.

Simulated Atomic Weapons

Most noticeable in this operation, as mentioned before, was the simulated employment of atomic weapons by both the Amphibious Forces and the Aggressor Force. The results were highly satisfactory and proved clearly the feasibility of their effective employment in an amphibious operation. In conjunction with their offensive employment, all troops were likewise exposed to the proper defensive measures to take when the enemy employs atomic weapons, with a view to retaining momentum and force to continue the attack.

What has been related above is now history but I am confident that should the necessity arise, the Third Marine Division will remain ready and capable to serve as an invaluable asset to our country's security.

Service Attrition

"recommendation" by the House Appropriations Committee that an officer-enlisted ratio be set up which would give the Army 106,000 officers instead of the 115,000 planned for fiscal '54 and the 127,000 now on active duty.

Even before the House Committee reported the money bill, the Army had estimated that about 4000 Reserve officers would be separated involuntarily, primarily by a highly selective approach to renewal of expiring categories.

After the House Committee reported the bill, it was feared the attrition figure for the Army would hit 10,000.

But during debate, the Committee eased the officer restriction so that perhaps 7000 will be separated.

As proposed originally, the Army would have had to save $19,000,000 in "pay of the Army" costs during fiscal '54 exclusively within officer strengths. However, as modified, the Army must still save that amount of money, but can accomplish the economy within "pay of the Army" as it deems best, although no money can be saved at the expense of enlisted promotions.

Consequently, it can be expected that the economy will be achieved by reductions in officer, warrant officer and enlisted strength.

It's a good bet also that the Army will permit certain personnel to get out earlier than had been anticipated. Graduates of Officer Candidate Schools, for example, who previously agreed to serve two years after graduation may very well be permitted to leave service after completion of a total of two years' service.

AIR FORCE—The Air Force has said previously that 4500 officers will go out prematurely, either as a result of their own application or by forced attrition.

But if the Air Force is not permitted to delay indefinitely—in effect to cancel—the call to active service of many thousands of its ROTC graduates, the forced attrition requirement could go well over the 4500 figure.

The Air Force has been granted authority to delay the call to active duty of about 4000 ROTC graduates, but a final decision on this matter has not yet been made.

Recent issues of THE JOURNAL have told how the Air Force will attempt to cut its officer strength to meet the lowered objectives.

The Air Force has said also that only a small percentage of its OCS graduates will go on active duty as Reserve officers. The remainder will serve on active duty as airmen with Reserve commissions or will be separated.

NAVY—Under Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas has informed the Naval Establishment that "several thousand" Naval Reservists will have to be released to inactive duty as a result of reductions in personnel.

He said retention boards will meet on 15 July to set up retention priority lists of active duty Reserve officers within each grade above lieutenant (jg), and within each classification. These lists will be based "on needs of the Service."

At the same time, Secretary Thomas stated that the Navy plans to give at least four months' notice to those officers scheduled for release from active duty. In setting up the retention lists, he said, "retirement equity will be given appropriate weight," but "no special fitness reports or references to duty performance are desired by the boards."

Mr. Thomas said Reserve officers who have no further obligated active service may request voluntary release from active duty.

He noted also that the officers being released will include some who "have remained voluntarily on active duty for a considerable time, and beyond their obligated service."

During the first eight days in July, the Navy issued orders to 22 commanders and 26 lieutenant commanders, releasing them from active duty.

The Navy said because of its commitment to support at present manning levels the active fleets, "the reductions will be taken primarily from the shore supporting activities."

Secretary of the Navy Robert B. Anderson said that the nation owes a great debt to our Reservists who, at considerable sacrifice to themselves and their families, have remained on active duty.

What it takes to train a bombardier!

15,130 Gallons' Gas

100 Bombs for Bombing Runs

265 Hours' Flight Training

1,814 Hours' Ground School

This tremendous investment in time and materials is necessary to turn an airman into a skilled bombardier! But costly as it seems, it's a bargain compared to what it would be without radar training devices that ground-train aircraft observers. These devices simulate actual flight conditions and enable Air Force personnel to learn to hit the target... before they ever leave the ground!

These new electronic trainers not only do a better job of training much more quickly, but effect tremendous savings in fuel, personnel, airplane maintenance, practice ammunition and bombs.

The Electronics Division of American Machine & Foundry Company, working closely with the Air Force through its various Commands, derives great satisfaction from the part it plays in keeping our Air Force the best-trained in the world.

Asst. SecNav For Air

President Eisenhower this week nominated Capt. James H. Smith, Jr., USNR-Retired, to succeed John F. Floberg as Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air.

Captain Smith was placed on the honorary retired list of the Naval Reserve in that rank on 1 June. A former Vice President of Pan American Airways and director of Slick Airways, he served as a commander with the Navy during WW II.

Secretary Floberg has served in that position since 1949. He will return to his law practice.

In a letter to Secretary Floberg, Secretary of the Navy Robert B. Anderson said "It was with regret that I transmitted to the President your letter of resignation. I fully realize, however, your desire to return to your chosen profession."

Secretary Anderson praised Mr. Floberg for his "vigorous enthusiasm" and his "high degree of intellectual curiosity." He said, "You have every right to be fully proud of the services you have rendered your country during more than three and one-half years which you have served in your present office."

Navy Sets Ration Fees

The Navy announced this week that the commuted ration and leave ration for enlisted personnel is now $1.10. Charges for sale of meals to enlisted personnel only, including flight meals, will be: Breakfast, 30c; dinner, 40c; and supper, 40c.

USS Forrestal To Be Completed In Dec. '54

Work on the Navy's first 60,000-ton aircraft carrier, the USS Forrestal, is about 15 per cent complete, it was disclosed this week, and the vessel is expected to be finished within the next 18 months.

Since April, the Navy said, "structural progress in the building dock on Forrestal has been very good." The vessel is being constructed at Newport News, Va., where the keel was laid one year ago next week.

Construction to date shows the following progress:

The inner bottom and the shell are complete, and piping has been installed throughout the major portion of the ship's length.

Machinery space bulkheads have been erected up to about the third deck. Part of the third deck in the machinery spaces has been installed.

Four boilers have been installed, and the center line rudder post has been erected.

The torpedo protection system is structurally complete up to about the third deck throughout the middle half of the ship's length.

In reporting on the Forrestal, the Navy noted also that progress is going forward on the USS Saratoga, second of the Forrestal-class carriers. Under construction at the New York Naval Shipyard, the Saratoga is scheduled for completion about 10 months after the Forrestal.

Marine Corps Opens Courses

The Marine Corps has announced that it is seeking applicants for courses of instruction in Land Ordnance, Chinese Language, and Postgraduate Law.

Regular male officers of the rank of first lieutenant and below may apply to attend the Land Ordnance Course, U. S. Naval School, Explosive Ordnance Disposal, Naval Powder Factory, Indian Head, Md. The course is of 12 weeks duration and is essentially the same as the Explosive Ordnance Disposal Course outlined in MC General Order 73.

Unrestricted regular ground officers of rank of captain and lieutenant may apply to attend the Chinese Language Course, U. S. Naval School, Naval Intelligence, U. S. Naval Receiving Station, Washington, D. C. The class commences in January '54 and is for 18 months. Instruction is in Mandarin (Kuoyu).

In opening the Postgraduate Law Course to new applicants, HQMC said all applications for the course which are now on file at Headquarters have been invalidated. Officers desiring consideration for the course which commences in the Fall of 1954 are being requested to submit their applications in accordance with the provisions of MC General Order 73, as modified by Change Three.

Heads Air, FMF, Pacific

Maj. Gen. Clayton C. Jerome, Commanding General of the Second Marine Air Wing, has assumed additional duties as Commanding General of Aircraft, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic. He succeeded Lt. Gen. Field Harris who was retired in his new three-star rank on 1 July.

General Shoup Named USMC Fiscal Director

Brig. Gen. David M. Shoup has been named Fiscal Director of the Marine Corps, succeeding Maj. Gen. W. P. T. Hill, who has occupied the dual offices of Quartermaster General and Fiscal Director for the past several years. General Hill will continue as Quartermaster General.

The appointment of General Shoup completes the separation of fiscal and supply functions in the Marine Corps, plans for which were first disclosed in THE JOURNAL on 27 Dec. At that time it was noted that "the eventual creation of a new Fiscal Director, a general officer," would be accomplished sometime this year.

Separation of the two functions, it was previously pointed out, was desirable because duties in each of the fields were becoming more complex as the result of the increased size of the Corps and a growing demand for improved supply and fiscal accounting and control.

General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., Marine Commandant, told THE JOURNAL late last year that "The completion of this important part in the progressive reorganization of the Marine Corps Headquarters will lead to more efficient operation and a more appropriate division of responsibilities."

General Shoup, who is 48, won the Congressional Medal of Honor during World War II for leading his troops in a heroic attack against the Japanese on Betio Island at Tarawa. He participated also in the Saipan and Tinian operations and acted as an official observer at Guadalcanal and Rendova in the Solomons.

Before reporting to Headquarters for duty as Assistant Fiscal Director, a position which he held immediately prior to his present appointment, General Shoup had served as Commanding Officer of the Basic School, Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va. He began his 28th year of service in the Marines last month.

U. S. Navy's most versatile plane stalks enemy planes, subs and surface craft

—the Douglas AD-5 Skyraider

Known for varied tactical uses—long-range attack, troop transport, close air support, aircraft early warning—the Douglas AD-5 is also capable of unique search and anti-submarine missions.

In this operation the AD-5 carries powerful radar equipment and a searchlight to detect and identify the enemy, whether on the surface, under the sea or in the air. Rockets, cannon, and torpedoes are used to make the kill. Key feature of the Skyraider is its efficient performance-to-weight ratio, which gives it extraordinarily long range—plus all the fire-power of a cruiser's full salvo.

Adaptability of the AD-5 Skyraider is another example of Douglas leadership in aviation. Designing airplanes that can be produced in quantity to fly faster and farther with a bigger payload is a basic rule of Douglas design.

Named ROA President

Col. Thomas H. King, USAFR, who holds an active service assignment as Executive to the Air Force Judge Advocate General, has been elected president of the Reserve Officers' Association.

After being released from active duty as a lieutenant colonel in 1946, Colonel King returned to Washington where he re-established his law practice. In July 1949 he transferred to the Air Force and the following year was appointed a colonel in the AF Reserve. Accepting an indefinite appointment in the Ready Reserve, Colonel King received the mobilization assignment which he still holds.

He is a long-standing member of the ROA and has held many assignments in the organization. He served as National Judge Advocate, chairman of the AF Affairs Committee, member of the AF Affairs and Legislative Committees. He also is past president of the District of Columbia Department, ROA, and a charter member of the Judge Advocate Chapter of the D. C. Department.

AF Center Writes Tax

Check for $124 Million

A check for $124,842,090.28—the largest check ever written at the Air Force Finance Center, Denver, Colo.—was presented last week to the Department of Internal Revenue by Brig. Gen. Richard L. Scott, Commander of the Center.

The check represented money from Air Force personnel in the form of withholding tax for the first six months of calendar year 1953. More than $53 million of the check represents actual collections for the months of March, April, May and June, 1953. The balance, $71,750,000, represents estimated amounts withheld on pay records for the six-months' period not yet audited.

The current payments of withholding taxes are made possible by extracting amounts withheld from the military pay records which are audited every six months by the Military Pay Division under the direction of Col. Clark L. Miller. The AFCC Central Disbursing Division then prepared the check under the direction of Col. Clyde W. O'Hern.

AF "Rodeo" Will Test Truck Drivers' Skill

The first Air Force "Rodeo" will be staged soon in conjunction with the Commercial Trucking Industry "Truck Rodeo" to promote greater efficiency in the operation of AF vehicles.

Intra-base eliminations will be held within the geographic limits of the eight Air Materiel Areas, and the winners will be matched at the Air Materiel Area "Zone" finals.

The final AF "Rodeo" will be held jointly with the American Trucking Associations, Inc., National Rodeo in St. Paul-Minneapolis during September.

National AF champions will be chosen in five vehicle classes and winners will receive appropriate trophies.

Brig. Gen. John P. Doyle, director of AF Transportation, said the proposed contest was "a means to honor and band together in the cause of safety and efficient operation the USAF vehicle drivers who have distinguished themselves by their safety record, skill and determination to attain the standards of excellence required of 'professionals'."

Largest Construction Lift

In Aviation History

The largest airlift of heavy construction equipment in aviation history was conducted jointly last month by the Aviation Engineer Force and the Tactical Air Command.

To provide the necessary equipment for an airfield rehabilitation project at Clovis AFB, N. Mex., five giant C-124 Globemasters of the Fourth Troop Carrier Squadron, Larson AFB, Wash., made 26 trips to Clovis from Carswell AFB, Tex., carrying 60 pieces of heavy equipment weighing 800,000 pounds.

The heaviest single piece of equipment was a C-8 crawler tractor with blade, weighing approximately 42,000 pounds. Other equipment included tounadozers, scrapers, graders and several types of trucks.

In addition to the equipment, the Globemasters also transported two officers and 116 enlisted personnel of Company B, 835th Engineer Aviation Battalion, Wolters AFB, Tex., who worked on the rehabilitation project.

The airlift proved the value and feasibility of transporting aviation engineer equipment and personnel, an operation which will make it possible to construct forward airfields in remote sections in relatively short time.

POSTHUMOUS PROMOTION

Word has been received that the Air Force has given a posthumous promotion from lieutenant colonel to colonel of Harry E. McAfee, killed in an aircraft accident on 25 March 1953 near Baltimore, Md. He was assigned to Air Research and Development Command Headquarters.

Colonel McAfee's widow, Mrs. Jean McAfee, resides at 47 N. Central, Campbell, Calif.

The posthumous promotion to colonel was made effective as of 24 March.

ARDC Starts XF-88B on High Speed Prop Flights

The successful first flights of a flight test bed for research on supersonic-type propellers has been announced by the U.S. Air Force's Air Research and Development Command at Baltimore.

The flights were accomplished under a development project of the Propeller Laboratory at the Air Research and Development Command's Wright Air Development Center, Dayton, Ohio, working in conjunction with the McDonnell Aircraft Corp. of St. Louis. An example of inter-service teamwork in the aviation development field, the XF-88B project is being accomplished by the U. S. Air Force with the cooperation of the U. S. Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

The flight test bed, an XF-88B, is equipped with an XT-38 Allison turboprop engine which powers a single propeller, in addition to the aircraft's regular powerplant of two J-34 Westinghouse turbojet engines which, with afterburners, can each develop approximately 4000 pounds of thrust.

The addition of an Allison engine, which powers a Curtiss electric propeller, enables the XF-88B to attain speeds beyond the normal range of propeller operation and will provide a valuable source for data on the high-speed operation of propellers.

Propeller gear boxes provide three propeller speeds. These speeds will be tested successively with propellers of approximately ten, seven and four-foot diameters in various combinations of two, three and four blades.

Approximately one month of flight testing will take place at Lambert-St. Louis Municipal Airport to check out the overall operation of the XF-88B before it is ferried to Langley Air Force Base where the research program with supersonic-type propellers will be conducted by the NACA. The ten-foot propeller blades will be utilized in the initial flight testing phase.

Take-offs on initial flights will be made with the propeller feathered until the fighter's jet powerplant has carried it to an altitude of 20,000 feet at which the initial turboprop "light-off" will be made.

Mounting of the Allison engine on the left side of the XF-88A forward fuselage required the movement of the nose landing gear to the right. The cockpit was redesigned to include the necessary engine controls and electronic equipment.

The Bureau of Aeronautics donated the T-38 turboprop and six J-34 turbojet engines used in the project.

In providing a flight test bed for research on high speed propellers, the XF-88B is expected to provide many of the answers to questions which have confronted both civil and military aviation planners in recent years. Turboprop transport might well be the answer to the present controversy of jet versus propellers for airline and many types of tactical military aircraft.

AF Nat. Gd. & Res. Policy

The Air Force will hold a meeting of the Air Staff Committee on National Guard and Reserve policy 12-14 August in Washington to consider the status of the Reserve Officers' Promotion Act, the long-range Reserve program, "and other current business."

The meeting was called by Secretary of the Air Force Harold E. Talbott.

AF Deputy Chaplain Chief Leaves Active Duty

Chaplain (Brig. Gen.) Augustus F. Gearhard, USAFR, Deputy Chief of Air Force Chaplains since September 1950, will leave active duty on 31 July and will revert to his permanent grade of colonel in the Reserve.

His home address is given as 4028 N. Prospect Avenue, Milwaukee, Wisc.

Chaplain Gearhard, who was 60 on 18 April, was curate at St. Michael's Parish in Milwaukee in 1918 when he was commissioned in the Army and went overseas as a chaplain with the AEF.

He was separated in June 1919 and remained on inactive duty until called to service in January 1942 as a lieutenant colonel.

He went to Australia with the Fifth Fighter Command in November of that year and later became chaplain of the Fifth Air Force and then the Far East Air Forces.

After the war he served as chaplain of the Air Defense Command and as chaplain of U. S. Air Forces Europe.

He is a recipient of the Distinguished Service Cross for WWI service and the Legion of Merit for his WWII record.

ANOTHER REASON ALLISON LEADS IN THE AIR

Sound Advice safeguards jet engine parts

FINGERS OF SOUND probe metal parts for hidden faults as Allison engineers use the Ultrasonic Reflectoscope

It is important that the metals used in critical jet engine parts be completely free of even the tiniest flaws. To eliminate the possibility of minute defects that even X-ray testing will not reveal, Allison engineers rely on an ultrasonic reflectoscope to test parts.

Allison was the first aircraft engine builder to use this unique means to search out subsurface faults. Here's how it operates: High frequency sound waves are sent into the metal part under test, and flaws of a rejectable nature cause "echoes" which are electrically recorded on a screen. This "sound advice" enables Allison to detect hidden imperfections that could not be discovered any other way.

Tests like this are another reason for Allison leadership, because they are typical of the thoroughness that pays off in greater dependability and has won the confidence of jet pilots of many nations.

Several engine pieces, like this J33 compressor, receive 100% Ultrasonic inspection

"No one appreciates more than a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff the vital contribution that our American industry makes to the security of the nation."
—GENERAL OF THE ARMY OMAR N. BRADLEY.

Industrial Preparedness. The policy statement on industrial preparedness issued this week by the Office of Defense Mobilization after concurrence by the President's Cabinet, parallels in many respects the Administration's approach to the problem of military preparedness.

Just as the new leadership has not accepted the force objectives previously established for the Armed Services, so in the case of industrial preparedness it makes no direct commitment to take over 100 per cent the earlier plan for broadening the mobilization base by setting up secondary sources, new plants, etc. The future policy on Defense strength levels will be determined on the basis of a number of new studies ordered by Secretary of Defense Wilson and to be undertaken by the new members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and his new civilian assistants. Likewise, the ultimate carrying out of the industrial preparedness policy will depend upon the results of a new series of studies which the ODM statement reveals are already under way.

The industrial objective, like that for the military, is to be geared to financial and material resources. "The over-all objective of the military and civilian organizations," says the new statement, "is to develop a mobilization plan that lies within our material and fiscal resources and yet generates the maximum military power that those resources can support with due consideration of the needs and contributions of the rest of the free world."

To find out specifically what is needed to attain this general objective, the ODM is taking a new look at the industrial picture. It is measuring the production potential of industry, estimating how much of it can be allotted to war goods, testing the ability of specific industries to produce up to the level allotted to the military, identifying deficiencies, and estimating what we would have to export to help our allies.

These studies, Mr. Arthur S. Flemming, ODM director says, will lay the groundwork for subsequent decisions as "to whether to fill in gaps in the national plant, or modify the military plan, or both." He specifically states that where such studies show that we need more capacity such "expansion will presumably be concentrated on providing long lead-time, difficult-to-produce, and critical types of tools, equipment, instruments, materials, energy, and technically trained personnel."

The final result, he says, will not be an economy geared to war production—that would be "far too expensive"—but rather "the development of a program which would provide us with an industrial position, or plans for it, from which we could move rapidly to maximum rates of balanced output of war and war-supporting goods." It should enable us, he says, to plan the largest military program within the limits of money and industrial resources, to develop an industrial organization capable of supporting a military program adequate to security, and to achieve economy.

Throughout his career as a soldier and since his elevation to the Presidency, General Eisenhower has consistently stressed the dependency of the nation upon industry as a full fledged partner of the Armed Forces for the defense of the nation. His interest in and knowledge of this problem is an assurance that the projected studies will be carried to a concrete conclusion.

propriations Committee to issue an order, much against their experienced judgment, severely curtailing the amount of piloting that officers may engage in to maintain their proficiency when they are not on duty directly involving flying. Hitherto, when pilots were given administrative duty or other assignments away from direct flying, they were required by Executive Order to fly a minimum of 100 hours a year to maintain their skill. If they flew less than that, they were penalized by loss of their flight pay. Now, the House Appropriations Committee, with the approval of the full House, has put a rider in the '54 defense money bill stating that such officers, if they have had 15 years of flying, can fly only a maximum of 12½ hours a quarter, or 50 hours a year. This—less than an hour a week—is not enough to keep them fully fit. General Vandenberg pointed out to the Committee that the system previously in force enabled officers to take command of F-86 Sabre jet units in Korea a month and a half after they had left their desks in the Pentagon. To cut proficiency flying in half would stretch out the time required to put a pilot back in a state of combat

The Pay Problem

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The Hook Commission made a long, careful and serious study of the pay scale and no fault could reasonably be found with its recommendations. But Congress arbitrarily reduced their recommended scale for officers (not enlisted men) by 5%. The long fight for cost of living increases is history now, but the increase finally, two years after Korea and the spurt in living costs already having been felt for that long, a non-retroactive increase of 4% in base pay and a 14% increase in allowances was granted. Since allowances approximate 25% of base pay, the net percentage increase is about 7½%, or only 2½% above the recommendations of the Hook Commission in 1949! Compare this with the increase granted Civil Service Workers in the per annum group. Since 1946 they have had two pay raises and one "adjustment" totaling approximately 20% net increase.

The Commanding Officer of my base, with is a Naval Shipyard, a man with terrific responsibility, makes less than many of his subordinate civilian employees. Incidentally, those of us living in government quarters and losing rental allowances are even worse off percentage-wise. Very few officers are living in government quarters these days which are worth the rental allowance. (Mine is a made-over house of 755 square feet 50 years old, no dining room or alcove and the bedrooms are 8 x 10, 8 x 10, and 10 x 12! In Saipan we lived in dilapidated Quonset huts which cost us up to $120.00 per month depending on rank.)

Superimposed upon this are the facts that mileage and subsistence allowances on business away from home are no where near compensatory, frequent moves of home and family invariably cause heavy non-routine expenses even though the government pays for the actual moving, and the extra cost of maintaining a separate home ashore for the family and one's own mess expenses while aboard ship, overseas or at a base near which they cannot find accommodations is considerable. (Collector of Internal Revenue please note: None of the above additional expenses are allowed as deductions on income tax.)

Army Promotions

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

At the risk of starting another controversy between "Old Timer" and "Youngster" I hereby submit my topic. I know of no other way in reaching whoever it is that decides such things than through your Letters to the Editor.

I'm fortunate in having been promoted to the temporary grade of lieutenant colonel so that I was supposedly considered when the last list of Colonels came out. Being a mere captain RA was given as the reason I was not on the list—but I'm still being embarrassed at being asked why was I passed over. My request is why not officially publish that captains will not be considered in the next go around if that is to be actually the case—or preferably for me, why not at least consider those on the Majors list but not yet promoted? It would appear that if Majors could be generals, captains could be Colonels. "HOPETUL" readiness or would force him into combat when he has not yet regained his skill.

The new rider proposes to save money on the operation of aircraft. Its weakness is the weakness of all legislative riders on appropriation bills—it is based primarily on a desire to save money and not on considered judgment of military efficiency. There has been much talk of stopping the practice of legislating by appropriation, but it seems to grow rather than diminish. The legislative committees, such as the Armed Services Committee in this case, should handle legislation by the accepted procedure of gathering facts from the Departments involved and any other interested witnesses, after which it can make recommendations to the House on the basis of its considered deliberations. The Appropriations Committee circumvents this procedure by slapping riders on the Appropriations bill which state that the funds appropriated cannot be expended unless certain policies desired by the Committee are put into effect.

Although the Appropriations bill has not yet become law, the Departments were forced to issue the new regulations because the fiscal year already had started and, if the rider be approved by the Senate, it would be violating the law. However, the Senate will be urged to kill the rider, which it most certainly should do—and insist on its elimination in the final conference.

Letter Signed "Matt" Stirs New Interest In Service Attractiveness At Capitol

An anonymous letter signed "Matt," which has been introduced in the House of Representatives, has stirred new interest on Capitol Hill in the problem of Service attractiveness.

The letter, addressed to Representative Alfred Sieminski (D-N. J.), who served in the Eighth Army in Korea, comments on questions raised by the Congressman after a recent visit to Ft. Benning, Ga.

Representative Sieminski's office declined to reveal the identity of the author of the letter.

Text of the letter, as released by Representative Sieminski, follows:

Text of Letter

Dear Al: Last night I returned from a very interesting and extremely educational trip to find your letter awaiting me. In view of your assurances, I am only too glad to try to be of some help and even if I were not to be protected, I would be willing to stick my neck out if I thought the future security of our country could be improved.

I don't think any personalities are appropriate or necessary, but I would like to preface my remarks by reminding you that I have no ax to grind. I have little to complain about. I am sure that we are at a low point now, and that things are bound to improve, but it's going to take some mighty strong friends of the Army like yourself to start us on the upswing. I can't tell you how much it means for us to know we have some real friends in Congress.

Bleak Outlook

As I told you over the phone, I am concerned with the bleak outlook for the Army in the future if we let things continue on their present trend. This being the case, I would never encourage my son to try to go to West Point and I know hundreds of other career officers who feel the same way. The main bone of contention is the failure of our Government to live up to the contract it made with us when we were commissioned: little things that, in themselves, could be taken in stride but which amount up in the aggregate.

To begin with, I assume you are concerned with Army prestige and morale; the two go hand in glove and are hard to separate. The reasons for the low point in the curve are, I believe, two-fold. One, the one you are concerned with mostly, is due to Congress and the short-sightedness that has been exercised in places in order to cut budgets. The other, which I shall discuss briefly later, is within the service and can be corrected by appropriate actions at the proper levels.

Quotes The Journal

I saw the questions you had posed on the floor as they were reprinted in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL a few issues back and was delighted. Since you are so vitally interested, it might pay you to subscribe to the JOURNAL for a while: it certainly covers the waterfront as far as pointing out what is needed to improve service prestige. I am taking the liberty of enclosing a few clippings from only one issue, the most recent.

One point to remember is that no matter what the lawmakers do to rectify conditions, they cannot please everyone. Another is that the most important one thing they can do would be to make the career Army (the word is well chosen for many Reserves are, in fact, career officers these days, and the permanent establishment is what we want to work on) feel as though they were appreciated and wanted. This can best be accomplished by a series of little things rather than something like an across-the-board 100 per cent increase in pay, for instance. And these little things are the very sort that will be easiest to put across. I don't say they won't cost anything for there's a price on all commodities and if they are dear enough to us, we're willing to pay the price. Like you, I certainly think we should pay something to raise our service prestige and morale, especially if we look upon it as life insurance—insurance that we'll be strong where we're needed when the chips are down.

Corrections Needed

Well, that's a lot of moralizing that probably doesn't interest you too much. The places where corrective action (in small amounts) is needed are many and I cannot possibly cover all of them adequately in one letter. In the main they consist of:

(a) A pay raise in keeping with the cost of living and comparable civilian salaries adjusted on a sliding scale.

(b) Reverting to equitable retirement benefits. This includes adequate pensions for service disability retirements and decent pensions for widows and children.

(c) Announced policies and sticking to them.

(d) A buildup of the backbone of our Army through fair promotion policies for the best qualified NCO's and officers.

(e) A fair efficiency report system. (Not a matter for Congress.)

(f) A return to personalities rather than dealing in serial numbers and MOS's. Chiefs of the combat branches would tend to this.

(g) Restoration of the old privileges: values at commissaries and post exchanges, adequate medical care, veterinary service, etc.

(h) Insecurity due to rapid turnovers, frequent overseas assignments, separation from families for prolonged periods.

(i) Inadequate housing. (Partly corrected by Wherry.)

(j) Inequitable taxes out of proportion to pay rates, cost of living, and nonreimbursable service-connected expenses.

(k) Restoration of household transportation costs in full.

(l) Permitting tired old colonels to retire when they are no longer of service.

Each of the above (not listed in any priority) deserves a page of explanation to the uninformed but I am certain you know the background of most. If any one in particular stumps you, please drop me a note and I'll explain in further detail.

Efficiency Reports

Paragraph (e) above needs a little clarification. To me an efficiency report should serve only one purpose: to spur the individual on to higher efficiency or to maintain his high level. But when the rated officer never sees his report (unless he is fortunate enough to visit the Pentagon several years later) how can he know where to direct his improvement? Further, when the rating officer has no idea what the final numerical value assigned is, how can he be absolutely fair to his subordinate? Remember how upset J. W. was about the foul report he gave H. S. when he tried to rate him superior?

In line with this is the terrible predicament many of our good officers are in when they have been passed over for promotion and career (mis)management won't tell them why. There are two outstanding cases here, both of whom I know to be superior officers regardless of what some superior may have thought of them over a relatively short period of time. Instances are legion I am sure, and the Government is no longer getting full efficiency out of these discouraged individuals. The point is, if they have failed they should be told why.

Probably the greatest single cause of low morale is uncertainty. Paragraph (c) is to blame for much of this. No one knows from one day to the next what's in store for him. Remember the frustration over in Korea, reaching the top of the rotation list only to have the policies changed overnight? Every study coming out of World War II indicated that 180 days in the line was all that should be expected of any man, yet 6 months in those rugged Korean hills were seldom enough for a ticket home.

Training Suffers

Training is suffering terribly everywhere due to the constant turnovers. Troop tests suffer because critical specialists are removed just prior to or during a test. The training of tank crews had to be suspended because of instructor personnel shortages.

Now to touch briefly on the points we in the service can correct ourselves, given time. The erroneous idea that we no longer needed sharpshooters but could spray the enemy with a volume of fire, left the man on the thin red line with no feeling of confidence. Worse still, it left us with no really qualified instructors in rifle marksmanship. Much more emphasis is needed here and it's going to take time to build up our militiamen.

I personally feel that it was a mistake to try to boost the infantryman's morale by decking him out like a Christmas tree. He looks like hell now with his blue scarf and trimmings: You can't manufacture morale that way.

Somewhere along the line we adopted a kid-gloves policy, with the result that we are lacking realism in our training. Being a little rough on the men in the Z. I. will certainly pay off in lives on the other side of the drink. But most of all, when treated too softly, the individual has no pride in "belonging." Unit esprit is essential also, and we've got to keep our men in the same unit longer than we are now.

Al, I could go on indefinitely, but I may not be offering you what you want. Please let me know how best I may offer you the material you need for ammunition.

Sincerely,

MATT.

Foreign Ministers Meet At Washington

THE meetings taking place in Washington this weekend at the foreign ministers level (Secretary of State Dulles, the Marquis of Salisbury, and M. Georges Bidault) will not lead to decisions so authoritative as might have been proposed at the abandoned Bermuda meeting, but that is just as well, all considered. For the proposals would have come from Sir Winston Churchill and, being pointed toward his particular program with relation to Moscow, they might well have run counter to President Eisenhower's program and, even more probably, counter to some of the views of a watchful Senate. There are now in progress, both in Europe and in the Far East, activities which would best run their course before the western world commits itself too deeply to any proposal conceived as much as a month ago.

What the Dulles-Salisbury-Bidault conversation can do is more useful in that it is not binding at all, but informative. Both of our ancient Allies can profit by a fuller understanding of the American state of mind, upon which any successful American policy must be based. That state of mind is better studied in Washington than in Bermuda, and by contacts which include the State Department but do not exclude non-departmental visits which are under way. We, in turn, may profit by discussions with two such old hands as Salisbury, who in Eden's absence has moved up to the head of the Foreign Office he knows so well, and Bidault, whose return to the Quai d'Orsay in the new Laniel cabinet enables him to resume the march-step he was employing in another cabinet not very long ago. If, in view of Sir Winston's health, it is possible to have a high-level meeting in London a few months hence, events may have shaped up well enough to make it profitable. It will lead to the later Big Four conference for which Churchill hopes. In any case, the current conversations will make that more likely than it was a month ago.

PREMIER JOSEPH LANIEL, in office a fortnight, has dared to push his luck while his majority is real and while its members keep in mind France's recently discreditable political record and the folly of throwing yet another government out of office. In brief, M. Laniel on Wednesday pushed through the French Chamber legislation to increase the long-needed taxes on alcohol and petroleum products and on certain other revenues, with a view to using the new income against recent temporary loans from the Bank of France. He also gained added executive powers for the effecting of numerous economies. For a nation in France's state this is all eminently sensible, to be sure, but those are the issues on which M. Mayer was lately thrown out of office, and on which no fewer than four candidates to succeed him were refused support. M. Laniel is a bold operator, or else he came into office at a good time.

AMERICAN CRITICS cannot consistently dwell on the fact that for the present M. Laniel is far less audible on the issues which are of profound interest to us, namely his nation's coming policy in Indo-China and the new government's intentions with regard to the European Army. For it has been charged that American authorities, too, have been paying a good deal of attention to internal politics and domestic economy and finance in the recent past. With regard to Indo-China in particular, France is at the moment compelled to handle the immediate necessity rather than reach a final decision on the somewhat more distant future. What we do in Korea may have a larger effect on Indo-China's future than anything which can be done in Paris in the next few weeks.

EAST GERMANY continues the center of much of our interest—and Moscow's. It remains a fact that Soviet armed strength is ample to maintain absolute control, so far as public order is concerned, throughout the satellite states, and we would be most mistaken in endeavoring to exploit a "rebellion potential" which does not exist. General Bradley this past week made some salutary observations on that general subject, pointing out gravely that the Russ threat to the west is just as great as ever, and that our own need to gain and maintain a vigorous defense is unaltered. What the workingmen's strikes and demands for concessions demonstrate is that Moscow can no longer depend on the satellites for active support in political, economic, or military programs. What is shown by Moscow's prompt concessions (in the way of shorter working hours, larger food distributions, and less collectivization) is that Moscow's new chiefs have seen that Stalin was hurrying Communism on his victims faster than such obdurate people as the Germans and Poles would take it. The less ferocious policies now being pursued, an observer must note, are comparable to the "new economic policy" which Lenin put into effect under like conditions years ago; incidentally that policy lasted long enough to let Lenin get Russia's own workers back into a harness they never since have broken. Our rejoicing over Moscow's undoubted troubles in East Germany, Poland, Rumania, and now Hungary—and Moscow's resultant undeniable loss of prestige among the befuddled Communists in the western nations—is justifiable, but it must not lead to complacency about a rosy future for ourselves.

GENERAL LAURIS NORSTAD, who for a long time has been working at top speed under one or another of his two caps is getting, instead, one new one—which comes with a guaranty that he will continue working at top speed. He is becoming the Air Deputy to General Gruenther and moving over to Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe, in accordance with the reorganization plan proposed months ago by General Gruenther's predecessor, General Ridgway. That reorganization also moves Marshal Alphonse-Pierre Juin (who had been ground forces commander, Central Europe) into the scheduled post as Commander-in-Chief of all Allied Forces—ground, air, and sea—in the Central European sector. Juin's ground commander will be a French general not yet named; his air commander will be Air Marshal Sir Basil Embry, recently chief of the R.A.F. Fighter Command; his naval commander will be Vice Admiral Robert Jauyard who has long been supervising NATO naval forces on the Rhine.

That disposes of General Norstad's old duties as Allied Air Commander Central Europe. His other duties as Commander-in-Chief U. S. Air Forces in Europe now go to Major General William H. Tunner, who has been Deputy Commander of the Air Materiel Command at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base and was lately assigned as Deputy C-in-C Europe, in preparation for his anticipated promotion. General Norstad, as Air Deputy at SHAPE, will have a larger share in policy matters and in coordination of air effort throughout all three sectors of General Gruenther's European command.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

"Captives in Uniform"—A strong feeling is growing throughout the Armed Forces that the Pentagon's continued and unexplained refusal to liberalize policies for acceptance of resignations from Regular officers is making "captives in uniform," and is creating a bad morale situation.

The Services are anxious for an early decision on this matter, particularly in view of impending forced attrition of Reserve officers. It is recalled that the individual Services had hoped to initiate liberalized rules for acceptance of resignations from Regular officers about 1 April. By that date, Reserve officers had to say whether they wanted to remain in active service or wanted out. The objective was as voluntary a Reserve force on active duty as possible.

Insofar as is possible, the Services consistently have sought to implement equitable personnel policies for all categories of personnel, Regular, Reserve, National Guard, etc. Therefore, plans were formulated for the early issuance of new resignation regulations. Defense Department approval, however, was an obvious preliminary requirement.

As reported previously, the Defense Department has thus far declined to give the green light on resignations of Regulars. Best guess is that Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson and Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah are fearful that there might be an adverse public reaction, and that as a result there might develop an insistence on new manpower reductions below those recommended by the Defense Department.

It is obvious, however, that the situation which now exists cannot go on indefinitely. For one thing, Congress would not tolerate a condition in which some officers who want to remain in service are being bounced out, while others who want to leave active duty are being held captive.

It's a good bet that with the wind-up of budget action, Mr. Wilson and Dr. Hannah will give the Services long-delayed approval to accept resignations from Regular officers on terms much more liberal than now in effect.

Chief of Infantry Discussed—General J. Lawton Collins' attitude towards re-establishment of the office of Chief of Infantry in the Army is told in a letter made public last week by Representative Alfred Sieminski (D-NJ).

An infantry officer in Korea, Mr. Sieminski had written the Army Chief of Staff for his views on the much-discussed proposal to again utilize branch chiefs in the Army.

General Collins said there was considerable advantage in having individual branch chiefs, but pointed to the need for a "broader outlook" as a result of the "combined arms concept" composed of Armor, Artillery and Infantry supported by air and naval power and supplied by the logistical and administrative services.

Said General Collins: "While this teamwork is simple in concept, it requires long training to perfect, and to be most effective this training must be conducted under a commander who has had wide experience in the combat employment of all arms. That is the reason for the great emphasis being placed on understanding the role of all of the various components in service schools today. . . .

"Another point bearing on this subject which I feel should be stressed is the relationship of the fighting in Korea to the combat doctrine of the Army," General Collins continued. "It is of tremendous importance that this combat experience be evaluated properly in the light of past experience and possible future employment. This problem is being followed continuously by the commanding general, Army field forces and his staff, which is made up of proportionate members of the three combat arms. . . .

"To achieve the cooperation and team work we must have, it is almost mandatory that these functions be performed by an agency with a broader outlook than would be likely under a system providing for separate chiefs of the combat branches.

"I wish to assure you that the Army is not unmindful of the benefits of having combat branch chiefs, even though it is felt they are outweighed by the need for furthering the teamwork concept."

Stimulate Flying Interest—Flight simulators are being used by many Air Force ROTC units to stimulate interest in flying. As part of the intensified program to increase the number of volunteers for flying training in the AFROTC program, the use of classroom simulators has been found helpful, as have the organization of private flying clubs and the utilization of AF aircraft for orientation flights. The current enrollment in the AFROTC program is 145,000.

Reserve Family Care Seen Controversial—The recommendation of the Defense Department Dependent Care Commission that eligibility for family medical care should extend to dependents of "retired members of the Armed Services, who are retired with pay and who have active service," undoubtedly will draw considerable opposition from civilian medical leaders.

In view of the increasing number of personnel being retired under provisions of Public Law 810, which provides retired pay for Reservists with 20 years' creditable service at age 60, the Moulton Commission's recommendation would cover thousands of families.

The American Medical Association has contended in recent years that the dependent care program of the Armed Forces is too liberal.

Two Navy Ships Play Caine—Filming of the Herman Wouk novel "The Caine Mutiny," now underway at Pearl Harbor and San Francisco, finds two Navy minesweepers playing one of the leading roles.

The USS Thompson is portraying the Caine in sequences filmed on the West Coast and the USS Doyle is being used in other sequences which are being shot at Pearl Harbor.

Honor Gen. Bradley—General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff until 15 August when he will go on inactive status, will be honored 24 July at a reunion of officers of the wartime First Army Headquarters. A stag dinner, which also will be attended by former officers of the Headquarters of II Corps and Twelfth Army Group who were in those organizations when General Bradley commanded them, will be held at the Ft. McNair Officers' Club, Washington, D. C. Additional information can be obtained from Col. J. B. Medaris, 1007 Hillwood Ave., Falls Church, Va.

MEMO

To Journal Readers

...If the Senate goes along with the House on the new version of the RETIREMENT RIDER in the '54 Appropriations Bill, the chances are good that a number of high-ranking officers, PREVIOUSLY BLOCKED from leaving active duty, may seek out. The replacement to the Van Zandt amendment permits an officer to retire if he has had service in the two World Wars. Among the officers who could take advantage of the new rider are Lt. Gen. C. B. Cates, CG of the Marine Corps Schools at Quantico, Va., formerly a four-star officer as USMC COMMANDANT, and Gen. John E. Hull, Army Vice Chief of Staff.

...There's a strong fear in the Air Force and Navy that if the House-imposed restrictions on PROFICIENCY FLYING stick, the threat to flying pay will be greatly increased. Many are suspicious that legislators next year would cite reduced flying time as an excuse for further curtailing or eliminating FLYING PAY for personnel not assigned to operational units. This year, possibly because of the influential STRAUSS COMMISSION REPORT, flying pay was not attacked directly in the House.

: : : :

...Strategically placed support is reported in the Senate Appropriations Committee for imposition of restrictions on AUTOMOBILE TRANSPORTATION overseas. It's possible the Committee, taking a cue from procedures in the counterpart House Committee, will recommend a MONEY BILL RIDER forbidding the shipment of autos by military personnel.

: : : :

...In addition to the persistent use of LEGISLATIVE RIDERS in money bills, the House Appropriations Committee apparently has learned another way to make end runs around the Armed Services Committee. The Committee includes in its latest report numerous RECOMMENDATIONS which gain wide acceptance as "the will of Congress," unless they are opposed on the floor of the House or Senate. Although its area of responsibility clearly is being invaded, the Armed Services Committee seems chary about LOCKING LEGAL HORNS with the Appropriations Committee in an economy year.

...The Army is already at work on plans for an ATOMIC EXERCISE next year. It will be one of 9 major exercises, including 1 mountain and cold weather, 2 arctic, 1 logistical, 3 conventional type and 1 "developmental exercise."

...The Defense Dept. has initiated a review of the entire ROTC PROGRAM in light of the current manpower cutbacks. The Armed Forces, notably the Air Force and Army, are confronted with a HEAVY SURPLUS of Reserve 2d Lts. The Air Force, beset with too many administrative officers in the ROTC grad ranks for its reduced requirement, asked Defense to endorse a proposal whereby hundreds of these young officers WOULD NOT BE CALLED to active duty. Defense, apparently fearful of any "it's a way to beat the draft" reaction, answered negatively. The problem remains unsolved, is one of the more complicated issues confronting Asst. SecDef. John A. Hannah, the Michigan State president who doesn't want to cut the ROTC program unless he has no other alternative.

AMERICA'S NEWEST WINGS FOR ATOMIC DEFENSE...

"DELTA WINGS," BORN AND BUILT BY CONVAIR'S

Engineering to the Nth power

WATER-BASED FIGHTER

Convair's twin-jet "Sea-Dart" (XF2Y-1) expands the air defense perimeter of fleets
at sea and bases ashore

LAND-BASED INTERCEPTOR

From this experimental design comes Convair's supersonic F-102 to spearhead U.S. defenses

HERE'S A TRIANGLE WITH MORE THAN THREE POINTS

Convair was the first to engineer, build and fly the triangular shaped solution to the problem of human flight in the vicinity of the speed of sound...and beyond. Through the versatile skills of Convair engineering, the delta configuration has already given America its first land-based, supersonic interceptor...and the world's first water-based very-high-speed jet fighter. Adaptations of the delta to bomber and transport designs are now under way. Proof again, that Convair engineering achieves the maximum of air power...Engineering to the Nth Power!

Col. Robert L. Mason has been appointed chairman of the Air Force Packaging and Materials Handling Board, the Air Materiel Command has announced. He succeeds Lt. Col. Robert W. Johnson, who has just completed a tour of duty as an AF Reserve officer.

Colonel Mason has been assigned to the materiel field most of his military career, which began 7 Dec. 1941. Prior to his present assignment, he was chief of the Policy Division, Deputy Chief of Staff, Materiel, at USAF Headquarters, Washington, D. C.

GMC Delivers First F-84F From Kansas City Plant

The Republic-designed F-84F Thunderstreak, the first jet fighter-bomber to be manufactured at General Motors' Buick-Oldsmobile-Pontiac assembly plant at Kansas City, is scheduled for a series of landing and takeoff tests at Olathe Naval Air Station. Later, it will be turned over to the Air Force for further tests.

The Thunderstreak is powered by a Wright J-65 Sapphire jet engine produced by GM's Buick Division and the Wright Aeronautical Corporation. It develops 7,200 pounds of thrust.

Harlow H. Curtice, president of GM, said a few more Thunderstreaks will be produced by the end of the year, and that a substantially greater number will be turned out in 1954.

Chief's Widow To Sponsor Tiny Target Submarine

The Navy will launch the first of two new 250-ton target submarines, the SST-1, at the Groton, Conn., shipyards of the Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics Corporation on 17 July.

The small submarine, 131 feet long with a beam of 13½ feet, will be used for training surface and air anti-submarine forces. She will have a complement of two officers and 12 enlisted men, will carry no guns, but will be equipped with one tube capable of firing anti-escort torpedoes. A single screw boat, the SST-1 will be powered with diesel-electric drive and storage batteries.

Mrs. Etta Muir of Fall River, Mass., widow of Chief Torpedoman's Mate Charles Roy Muir who was lost aboard the USS Amberjack off New Britain in 1943, will sponsor the new submersible.

Chief Muir, who was well known among submariners, having served for several years as an instructor for officers and enlisted men at the Submarine School, New London, Conn., was posthumously awarded the Silver Star medal.

Mrs. Muir is the first widow of an enlisted submariner who has received the honor of sponsoring a submarine since WW II. She will be accompanied at the launching ceremony by her two sons, Charles Roy Muir, 18, and James Robert Muir, 11, and her sister, Miss Myrtle Slusser.

U. S. Coast Guard

COAST Guard officials are disappointed with the report of the Department of Defense Dependent Care Commission which, it had been hoped, would recommend action to eliminate current injustice to the families of officers and men of the Coast Guard.

The Commission, headed by Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president emeritus of the Brookings Institution, heard Coast Guard officials relate how thousands of families are denied medical and dental care comparable with the other Armed Services.

The Coast Guard witnesses explained that Public Health Service Hospitals were widely scattered. They asked that Coast Guard families be allowed to use Army, Navy or Air Force medical facilities on a "space available" basis.

For example, there is authority for the care of Navy families at an Army medical installation, but no such authority exists for the treatment of Coast Guard families.

The Commission, although it recommends that dependent care "be made uniform in all the Services," has only the following statement regarding the situation in the Coast Guard:

"In periods of declared war, the Coast Guard becomes officially a part of the Defense establishment, and the personnel involved have participated on the same basis as the regular forces. However, at the conclusion of peace the Coast Guard reverts to its normal status as a division of the Treasury. Once the shift back to the Treasury has been made, eligibility to have their dependents provided with medical care in military hospitals ceases. They qualify, however, for medical care under the Public Health Service Hospitals.

"It has been ruled, however, that dependents of Coast Guard personnel who have lost their lives as members of the Navy during wartime lose their claim to medical care after the Coast Guard returns to the Treasury jurisdiction. This situation is the result of legal provisions rather than deliberate policy. It seems to the Commission to be inequitable; and it is recommended that dependents of Coast Guard personnel who lose their lives as members of the Navy during wartime should retain their eligibility."

The failure of the Commission to state in clear terms a recommendation that Coast Guard personnel be treated the same as members of the other Services when it comes to dependent care means that the Coast Guard will have to look to friends on Capitol Hill for remedial legislation.

Award of Honor

An Award of Honor, the highest made by the National Safety Council, was presented to the Coast Guard 6 July.

The council's award, for industrial plants, is for reduction of disabling accidents at the Coast Guard Yard, Baltimore, Md. The award was made by H. Chapman Rose, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and was received by Vice Admiral Merlin O'Neill, Commandant of the Coast Guard.

Since 1949 the number of disabling injuries at the Yard has been reduced from 34.9 per million man-hours worked to 6.8 in 1952. The figure for the first half of 1953 is approximately 5.24.

AF Selects 374 From 827 Eligible Perm. Lt. Cols., 267 Names Sent To Senate For O.K.

The Air Force this week released the names of 374 permanent lieutenant colonels selected from among 827 eligible officers for permanent advancement to colonel.

The Air Force has sent to the Senate for confirmation the names of 267 of these officers. The remainder will be nominated on 1 July 1954.

An officer may be passed over for promotion to permanent colonel on more than two consecutive occasions. The "two pass-over and out" provisos for lower ranks do not apply to promotions for colonel.

The Air Force Promotion List selections released this week begin with the name Ellis H. Wilson, 743A and extend through John E. Nitsche, 2069A.

There were 362 Air Force Promotion List selections, five Medical, 3 Dental, 2 Veterinary, 1 Medical Service and 1 Chaplain.

All of the specialist corps selections already have been nominated to the Senate for promotion.

The last name on the Air Force Promotion List, sent to the Senate for approval, was that of Robert L. Delashaw, 1913A.

16-Month Korea Tour

Likely After Truce

Achievement of a truce in Korea likely will be followed by the establishment of a fixed tour of duty for Army personnel there—probably 16 months.

Army officials have said that the total ineffectiveness time of an inductee is about eight months.

Thus, with a 16-month tour in Korea, the draftee's two-year obligation would be discharged.

It is understood, however, that the U.S. Army Forces Far East is working on a modified rotation plan which would still utilize a "points approach," rather than fixed months of service.

Possibly, this system would award greater or fewer points for each month of service in Korea, dependent upon the location and the rigors of the duty performed.

Even if such a system is employed, Pentagon officials still estimate that the average tour in Korea would be about 16 months.

Def. Dept. Gives Congress New Construction Bill

Congress this week received from the Pentagon a public works authorization bill which would provide $529,386,000 worth of construction at Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps installations, but which would not require additional appropriations in the current fiscal year.

The Defense Department said a request will be made to the Appropriations Committee for authority to use construction money previously voted for the Armed Forces.

The authorization bills are considered by the Armed Services Committees.

The new construction projects to be authorized include 169 named installations located in 41 states. In addition, the proposal includes projects in Alaska, Okinawa, Mariana Islands, the Philippine Islands and Cuba. Still others projects will be at undisclosed locations.

The new projects are divided among the three military departments as follows:

	(Thousands of Dollars)
	Inside Continental United States	Outside Continental United States	Aircraft Warning and Control, and Classified Projects	TOTAL
Army	$ 51,962	24,550	69,108	145,620
Navy	68,764	26,305	1,069	96,138

Defense Protests Bar To Off-Duty Education

The Defense Department has called upon the Senate Appropriations Committee to rescind action taken by the House which would bar expenditure of funds for off-duty education of officers in the Armed Forces.

The House, in passing the Fiscal '54 Defense Appropriations Bill, voted approval of a rider—specifically, it is Section 641 under General Provisions—which prohibits aid for officers' off-duty education.

Section 641 states:

"No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be used for the payment of tuition or expenses for off-duty training of officers."

Some Pentagon legal experts interpret the wording of the rider as being so binding that it could forbid the Services to process correspondence courses at military educational facilities, such as the correspondence courses from the Command and General Staff School or the Air University.

The fiscal '53 Appropriations Act had denied permission to the Army to assist in tuition costs for undergraduate off-duty education of officers. The Navy and Air Force, however, were able to defray up to 75 per cent of such costs during the past year.

In recent budget testimony, the Army asked that all Services be permitted to give tuition aid.

But the Committee rejected this plea. Instead, it adopted the all-Service rider, which now is being contested by the Defense Department in the Senate.

Army and AF Differ On Funeral Ceremonies

Although Army military funerals will continue to end with the sound of rifle shots, Air Force funerals henceforth will end with silence.

The Air Force has sent an order to its major commands directing that personnel are not to serve as members of firing squads at military funerals.

The Army indicated it had no intention of changing the procedure which has been used since creation of the U.S. Army.

The Air Force took the action to abolish the traditional three rifle volleys after a two-year study in connection with formulation of a new funeral manual.

Air Force ceremonial experts learned during this inquiry that in most cases families do not desire the traditional rifle shots terminating the funeral. It was said that in numerous instances the rifle fire produced an aggravating shock to the bereaved family following the serenity of the burial service.

Military officials say that the custom was begun in medieval times. After a battle, there was a period of truce for burial of the dead. The termination of this truce was indicated by the firing of rifle volleys.

AF Generals Retire

Six Regular Air Force officers, who either held the general officer rank or were advanced to such rank, were retired in the period from 1-30 June 1953.

The retirement of Maj. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg in the grade of general headed the list. He was retired for physical disability (100 per cent) after 30 years and 19 days' service.

Other retirements included Col. Charles W. Sullivan, advanced to brigadier general after 35 years' service; Lt. Gen. Hubert R. Harmon, USA-Ret., who reverted to retired status; Col. Harry A. Johnson, retired in grade of major general, for physical disability, after 36 years' service; Col. Robert W. Martenstein, retired as a brigadier general, for physical disability, after 36 years, 11 months and 26 days, and Col. Clyde K. Rich, retired as brigadier general, for physical disability, after 30 years' service.
